The north-eastern part of the country is still badly affected by the tropical cyclone which hit a month ago. The winds and floods caused widespread damage to homes and farms, and led to the displacement of thousands of people. Help has arrived in the form of donations of food, medicines and shelter, and following the government's approval of the plans, the construction of new homes has begun. However, aid organisations are still having difficulty reaching all the victims. A lot of debris is still blocking many roads and until it is removed, some areas will remain inaccessible. Because of this, it is impossible to assess the full extent of the damage with any accuracy.

After days of heavy rain, a landslide buried around 200 homes in one town in up to 30 metres of mud. Those houses that remain are severely damaged and there is total silence in what is now a ghost town. The survivors have been taken to an accommodation centre, where they are recovering from their ordeal. The disaster will put pressure on the government to reconsider proposals for preventing landslides, which have become more frequent in recent years.
